PRAYER.

Little children, when the evening Falleth with its quiet shade Over tree-top, sky, and steeple, Ere your little heads are laid

Little children, when the morning Poureth o'er the eastern hills Its bright flood of blessed sunshine, Making glad the fields and rills. Ere you leave your quiet chambers, Pause and kneel and humbly pray To the God who has preserved you To behold another day.

Little children, when temptation
Cometh with its tyrant power,
Pray to God, dear little children,
In that dark and bitter hour.
He will then disarm the tempter,
Turn from you his poisoned dart,
And with grace and strength triump!
Make his throne within your heart.

Little children, when his summons
Calls you from these scenes away,
Ask him to receive your spirits,
Pray, dear little children, pray;
Pray that through the Great Redeen
You may rise to life and light,
And glad hallelujahs singing,
Dwell forever in his sight.

RELEASED. A little low-ceiled room. Four walls, Whose blank shut out all else of life, And crowded close within their bound A world of pain; and toil and strife,— Her world. Scarce furthermore she knew Of God's great globe that wondrously Outrolls a glory of green earth. And flames it with the restless sea.

Four closer walls of common pine; j And therein lying, cold and still, The weary flesh that long hath borne Its patient mystery of ill.

Regardless now of work to do, No queen more careless in her state, Hands crossed in an unbroken calu; For other hands the work may wait. Put by her implements of toil: Put by each course, obtrusive sign, She made a Sabbath when she died, And round her breathes a rest divine

Put by, at last, beneath the lid, The exempted hands, the tranquil face; Uplift her in her dreamless sleep, And bear her gently from the place. Oft bath she gazed, with wistful eyes. Out from that threshold on the night; The narrow bourn she crossed now; She standeth in the eternal light.

Off she hath pressed, with aching feet,
Those broken steps that reach the door;
Heaceforth, with angels, she shall tread
Heaven's golden stair, for evermore!

There has transpired in this city during the past two weeks, says the Kansas City Times of December 24, one of the most remarkable cases on record, being no more nor less than the extraction, root and branch, without pain, and by the simplest of means, of a large cancer, from the left cheek of Mr. C. A.

Chace, freight agent at Kansas City of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad.

Mr. Chace discovered about six years ago a small red spot growing upon his left cheek, immediately below the eye. This red spot increased in size, and soon developed one of those dangerous and most unpleasant of bodily afflictions-a cancer. For about two years Mr. Chace has tried every medical advice and treatment, and still the horrible protuberance continued to grow, and threaten ultimately to eat away the face and cause him to lose one eye. A council of physicians, each of them prominent in his practice, was held a few tion, had it been carried out, would have endangered the life of the patient, hence it was not adopted. About two weeks ago Mr. Chace called upon Prof. Kellogg, proprietor of the Turkish Baths, on Walnut street, who boldly announced

Mr. Chace applied, by Professor Kellogg's advice, a poultice, which aided in drawing the cancer from the cheek. It first became red on one side, and then burst the skin. fess the object is still a mystery.
